It was on the airplane from Beijing to Berlin, sat next to me was a mid-aged German lady, who has been trained as an architect and whose husband is a mason, thus how she introduced me the German word of "wanderschaft", a journeyman in later medieval Germany, moving from one town to another to gain experience of different workshops, train to be an aspirant master...

I was reading Walter Gropius's "the theory and organisation of the bauhaus" once for a while, but I didn't realize it was the same meaning as "journeyman" in the text.

I walked down one day in Weimar around the Market, I saw a "journeyman" and a "journeywoman" in walking costum ...

I talked to them.

lay on the bed of the floating river of Ilm, at right at its heart...

the wanderschaft to the master of nature

at that moment every thing is flowing...
